Thousands of glant Australian Jellyfish, are visible in the Sound from 600 feet above.

Steve Rouse, assistant news service director at USM, videotapes jellyfish in the sound from the air Friday.

Scientists get aerial view of jellyfish

BY BENNIE SHALLBETTER · Staff Writer

Scientists from University of Southern Mississippi took to the skies over Hancock County and the Mississippi Sound in an effort to get a better handle on the ongoing infestation of giant Australian jellyfish.

The jellyfish love to eat and so they love the Mississippi Sound. The sound has a very high density of plankton and is a very nutrient rich environment for these animals Harriet Perry of Gulf Coast Research Labs in Ocean Springs said Wednesday.

That probably explains why this particular species of jellyfish, which comes originally from the coast of Australia, and was later introduced into the Caribbean, is not only thriving here but reaching sizes at leas twice as large as normally expected Perry said. Normally the phyllorhiza punctata, a native to the Indo-Pacific Ocean area, reach a globe size of no more than 25 centimeters but in the waters of the Northern Gulf of Mexico the creatures are growing to a diameter of 50 centimeters or more. Jellyfish shrink in size when their source of food is limited.

The view of the creatures from the air on Friday was alarming. We took off from Stennis International Airport, flew over Bayou Caddy in Waveland and on out about five miles toward the barrier look before heading back to area."

Their catch was severely hampered by the infestation of glant jellyfish in the Mississippi Sound.

The creatures in our waters eat certain kinds of plankton. "Our concern is that they are are feeding on zooplankton,

Recent rainfall has helped emergency crews quench the extreme wildfire problem in Hancock County and the rest of South Mississippi, authorities say, but we aren't quite out of the woods yet.

According to the Mississippi Forestry Commission on Friday, more than three inches of rainfall soaked Hancock County in the past week alone, helping slow the continuing burn of fires caused by dry conditions and unauthorized, illegal or careless burning.

USM online courses

In two years, student enrollments in online courses at the University of Southern Mississippi have skyrocketed, and another record enrollment is possible this fall. Thirty-nine students were enrolled in the two Southern Miss courses offered via the Internet during the fall of 1998, compared to 638 students currently taking 52 online courses this summer.

With more than 60 courses anticipated this fall, student numbers are expected to increase - unless USM's tightened budget reduces the number of faculty available for online teaching. With about a month before classes, more than 450 students had enrolled for fall online course offerings.

"Our rate of growth is very typical of what's happening across the country," said Sue Pace, director of USM's Department of Continuing Education and Distance Learning. "People are becoming very computer savvy."

USM's online courses are totally web-based - even including registration - and students generally don't have to travel to a Southern Miss campus. Online chat groups, bulletin boards and e-mail foster interaction between instructors and students.

"There's so many adults working or disabled or at home or taking care of parents or children," Pace said. "They're not as able to come to campus. but they want to keep their minds intellectually active."

Pace said Southern Miss's success with online courses has. occurred partly because of its affiliation with the Southern Regional Electronic Campus, which is regulated by the longstanding, 16-state Southern Regional Education Board.

That affiliation assures students that their online courses are accredited and comparable to traditional face-to-face instruction.

Faculty at Southern Miss and elsewhere are "warming up" to the idea of online instruction, Pace said. One reason is that professors have

Southern Miss faculty use WebCT software - short for Web Course Tools - to develop through courses online Continuing Education. USM's Office of Technology Resources now offers classes for faculty interested in learning how to teach with WebCT. For details on USM's online offerings, http://dl.cice.usm.edu or call (601) 266-4186.

Correction

Due to a typographical error, it was incorrectly reported in Thursday's edition of The Sea Coast Echo that Bay St. Louis Mayor Eddie Favre's proposed budget for the city included $600,000 each for the National Guard and Red Cross. Favre's proposal was $600 each.

Also in Thursday's paper, an article about Waveland author Paul Estronsa LaViolette's booksigning on Saturday inadvertantly left out the location. The book signing took place at Barnes & Noble bookstore.

Riding the rails: How many must die?

I guess I have always been fascinated by trains. There's a certain romantic mystery surrounding trains. Big, fast and powerful, traveling down the tracks toward some unknown adventure.

As a child, I wanted to just jump through one of those open boxcar doors and ride off down the rails into my own day

My wife's late brother, father and grandfather all worked for the railroad here in Bay St. Louis. I learned quickly to never complain waiting at a crossing on the table, boy." Trains here were held in very high esteem, almost reverence.

History tells us that the railmasses. Towns sprung up along the tracks, Cities grew at railroad junctions. The East and West Coasts were connected by the trains. Massive amounts of goods and materials are still are a very important component of all our lives.

Points to Ponder

by James R. "Randy" Ponder Editor and Publisher

A very dark side.

Trains kill people. And it seems in South Mississippi this is especially true. In the three Coastal counties of Hancock, for a train to pass. "That's food Harrison and Jackson, ten people have lost their lives in just this week, a young man in Biloxi was killed at a railroad roads opened this country to the crossing. He was the fourth person to die at that SAME crossing since 1991. Last August, two perished at the Webb Street crossing in Bay St. Louis.

In the railroad's defense, a delivered by rail. So, yes, trains train can not quickly stop when a car pulls in front of it. A long, heavy freight train traveling at But trains also have a dark about 40 miles an hour needs the emergency brakes are applied.

And drivers do not always pay attention at crossings. A person might travel across a certain set of tracks for months and not see a train and be lulled the past year and a half. Just into a false belief that there is never a train on those tracks. Maybe he or she is in a hurry, or preoccupied with the radio. For whatever reason, it happens.

Fast moving trains in a highchildren and a young woman ly populated area with numerous ungated crossings should simply not be tolerated in this day and age.

What can be done to rectify this unsafe and unacceptable situation?

more than a mile to stop after the railroad has proposed, and people have died?"

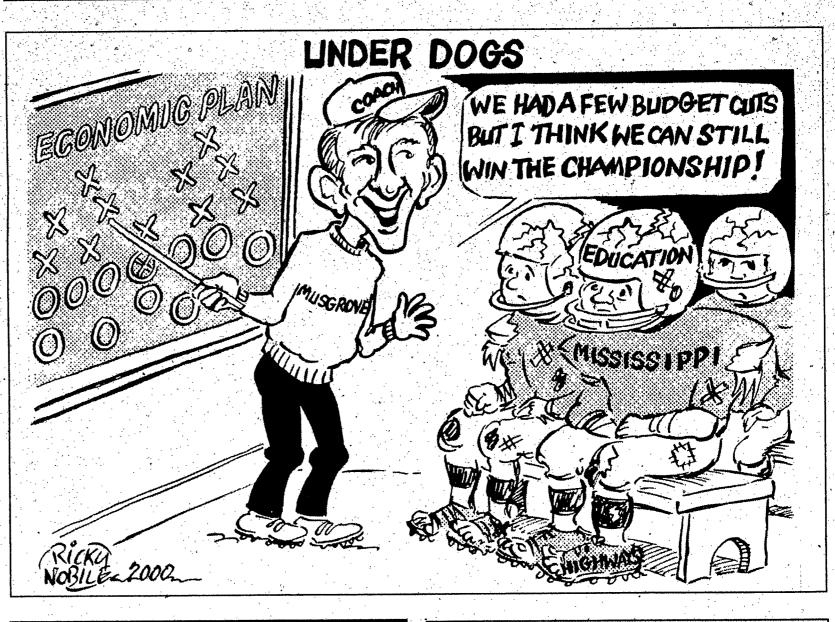

close some crossings. But then the people who live nearby would probably complain that they would be inconvenienced and that it might take emergency personnel longer to respond if ever needed.

Could the railroads be forced to place lights and gates at each and every crossing? They claim it is out of the question, too expensive.

How about slowing the trains to a reasonable speed? It is insane to allow trains to barrel through our neighborhoods and towns at 45 miles an hour and yet have 25 mile an hour speed limits for vehicles on the streets!

There has been some talk of relocating the railroads north of Interstate 10. That's a great plan! If the tracks were north of I-10, there would be far fewer crossings, far fewer gates and warning lights to be installed. There would probably be far fewer tragedies.

Perhaps the lyrics from an old 60's protest song sums it up best, "How many deaths will it For starters, we could do as take till we know that too many

A few words from Kathy Pinn...
"If you wait long enough and get old enough you too may be able to realize a dream. My dream has always been to own my own shop. The biggest decision is deciding "what" to sell.

About four years ago I started putting interesting and "not too expensive" furniture and collectible pieces in consignment locations. It was more of an avocation than a vocation. When the shop on the corner of Coelman Avenue and Bourgeois became available, I seized the chance to start my own business. Because of the location, in addition to antiques and collectibles we added new items to sell such as lamps, silver jewelry, gift items, kites and other wind things.

Thanks to the wonderful people who frequent Waveland we have seen a little success over the past few months. I hope that my past retail and business experience will enable me to meet the needs of our customers and "That Cute Little Shoppe" will provide a pleasent shopping experience."

pay anyone else to do my taxes.' And that's true. But last year I earned a very nice part-time income from January to April and I couldn't be happier."

The full course takes twelve weeks to complete and gives graduates the training to potentially earn extra money for the full tax season (about three months). Another option is a six-week course that SLIDELL COVINGTON

Successful graduates are offered interviews for employment with Jackson Hewitt. And many go on to work in one of the company's more than 3,000 offices around the country using their new skills.

From college student to military spouses to retirees, graduates of the course say they've improved themselves as well as their pocket-books. "I'm not tied down to any one place," said Steve Newman, a college junior. "I can take this skill and earn extra cash in all fifty states. And my hours are my own. Although some graduates have a background in accounting, many do not. But once they learn on the state-of-the-art computerized equipment, they have no trouble preparing returns. "Now I tell people I moonlight as a tax whiz," Mrs. Warner said. "My grandchildren think it's cool.

Casino -- Diamondhead plan derailed

Friedman, touted as an expert on environmental law, ruled the Corps of Engineers had violated the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act by issuing the permits. In effect, he determined the Corps did not study enough the cumulative effects the Casino World and Mandalay developments would have on the Bay of St. Louis and on Biloxi's Back Bay, where the d'Iberville project is planned.

Gulfport environmental attorney Reilly Morse, who helped those opposing the casino challenge the projects in local courts, called Friedman's ruling a "resounding victory" for opponents.

Representatives of the Gulf Islands Converservancy and Friends of the Earth viewed the ruling as vindication of their long efforts to stop further large-scale construction on the Mississippi Coast until the Corps completes an EIS.

'Mississippi is losing its wetlands at a terribly fast rate and the quality of life in our coastal communities have been jeopardized by the Corps failure to comply with the National Environmental Policy Act," said Terese Collins of the Gulf Islands Conservancy, "The fight to protect our environment and our quality of life has been a long and hard one. We're delighted that the court has agreed with us that it would be foolish, as well as illegal, for the Corps to issue permits for these projects without first determining their impacts."

The judge's ruling was disappointing, but not devastating to Deborah Vitale, president of Florida-based Europa Cruises Corp., which wants to develop a casino and destination resort on 404-acres off Interstate 10 south of the Diamondhead Community.

"Compared to the setbacks we have endured all along, this pales in comparison," said

She said she does worry the judge's ruling might set a precedent for environmentalists and opponents of any other large scale projects to run to Washington for relief.

"We have no intentions of bandoning our plans to develop a major destination resort that the community and citizens of Hancock County can

The Southeast Division of the MFC, which handles Hancock, Pearl River, Stone, Harrison, Jackson, Forrest and George counties, had fought 17 fires in the district through Wednesday of last week, down from between 15 and 20 fires statewide per day.

However, officials say, while there has been more rain in the past month than in the previous two, the area is still "above average" on the drought index. meaning that dry leaves and limbs on the ground, combined with high temperatures and low bodies of water can quickly return the situation to critical.

> A thousand year old Buddha sits silently overlooking a reflection pool in the mists of a grove lined by ancient moss covered oaks, flanked by giant bamboo. In the pool swims an alligator and several snapping turtles who seem unaware that anyone is watching them as they disappear into the shadows of the roots of a giant oak reaching into the water.

If this sounds like somewhere you would like to visit, you can, in neighboring Louisiana, just 120 miles west of New Orleans at Iberia Parish's Jungle Gardens on Avery Island.

The ideal time to visit is, of course, in the spring when 800 varieties of camellias, thousands of azaleas of many varieties in white, magenta, pink, red, purple, and variegated colors, and the wisteria arch are all in bloom. But I had waited ten years to make it back to Avery Island, so when my husband offered to take me last week, I jumped at the chance.

Because we were flying our small plane to New Iberia, we called ahead to inquire about rental cars from the airport. The folks at Acadiana Regional Airport offered us the use of the "airport car," a big old Suburban. The weather looked good Sunday morning and we were off, the swamps and sugar cane fields stretching out below us with tiny communities accessible only by boat, dotting the bayous.

both plant and animal seems to burst with a healthy energy. It is immediately obvious that the caretakers of the park are masters of their craft. The lucky wildlife that call Jungle Gardens their home are wary but accessible and one small gator seemed to take a liking to us. He swam to shore and was just about to crawl out and get closer when we decided to get back in the car.

Avery Island is actually a salt dome which extends about eight miles under the surface and where Edward McIlhenny made his family home over 125 years ago on 200 acres there. Peppers for the family business, Tabasco sauce, are grown on the island and mixed with vinegar and the salt mined there. In 1895, when egrets were being hunted to extinction for their plumage, McIlhenny built an aviary, captured and raised eight wild egrets. When they had raised their hatches and were ready to migrate, he released them. In the spring they returned with others and soon thousands of egrets and herons came to raise their young. Other varieties of birds followed. Through the years Avery Island has become a sanctuary for many varieties of plants and wildlife.

We ate our sandwiches along the bayou, watching herons search for fish, wishing we could stay in the little paradise with them and decided to take a walk through the bamboo forest that led to Buddha's Temple. It was here that we discovered the second thing we should have brought, insect spray. Maybe an afternoon of paradise would be enough after all. If you would like to visit Jungle Gardens:

Follow I-10 to exit 103 at Lafayette, follow Hwy. 90 through Lafayette toward New Iberia. At LA 14, exit and turn left, at LA 329 junction, turn right. Stay on LA 329 until you reach Avery Island. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

For the occasion she selected a silk white satin and illusion gown designed by Helen Morley of New York. The fitted bodice featured an off-the-shoulder neckline and short cap sleeves. The entire bodice consisted of multiple rows of tucking that gracefully ended in a dropped waist. The full illusion skirt was bordered with a band of white satin ending at slipper length with a chapel train.

She wore a custom designed headband-style headpiece of pleated silk-faced satin complementing the design of the bodice of the gown. The veil of illusion extended past her chapel-length train. The bride carried a cascading bouquet of sunflowers and wildflowers.

Main Street Methodist's Can-Do Kids

Main Street United Methodist Church recently turned their church into a clubhouse of Can-Do Kids. At "Club Can-Do: Kids Called to Care," kids saw how children from the Old and New Testaments fulfilled God's plan in Bible times.

Just as God worked through those children, God worked through the Can-Do Kids at this year's Vacation Bible School to make a difference in the world around them. Club members participated in Can-Do stories, Can-Do songs, Can-Do games, Can-Do crafts, and Can-Do fun.

Each child participating at this year's VBS left a handprint on a Clubhouse banner showing how each person can reach out and as a Can-Do Kid: Kids Called to Care.
